Sheetla Mata Temple incident... and now, the formality of an investigation

Published: 23 Oct 2026

Gwalior | People are slowly starting to forget the Sheetla Mata temple accident, which caused 16 deaths. At the administrative level, no immediate effort was made to learn a lesson from the chaos that occurred there. Neither was there an attempt to understand the geographical location of the place and the difficulties faced by devotees, nor to get information about the mismanagement in the temple. Now, it’s just a matter of waiting for the formality of a report after an investigation. After that, the matter will be shelved. PCC Chief, who visited the injured and deceased devotees, first went to the trauma center and then to the homes of the deceased to check on them. He also held the Collector and SP responsible for the entire incident. The temple committee has stopped the removal of temporary shops set up outside the main gate of the temple complex. Meanwhile, the temple's head priest has written to the administration to remove the old dharamshala here. There is also a growing demand to build a flyover on the main temple road to control crowds during Navratri.
